The Interactive Online IO seminar—aka (IO)^2—will meet every two weeks during Fall 2021. Seminars will take place on 9/14, 9/28, 10/12, 10/26, 11/9, and 11/23, 3-4:15pm ET.

The lineup is below. The seminar is open to everyone except Zoombombers, so feel free to share and advertise with faculty, students, and any other interested parties.

To participate in the seminar, you will need to click on this link. The password is “fallioio” without the quotation marks.

This Fall, IO^2 will continue to be a regular Zoom meeting. This will allow for better interaction between the speaker and the participants. For this reason, we will ask participants to leave their webcams on and to ask their questions during the presentation (though speakers may plan for specific question breaks).

We will use this page for any future seminar announcements or to address any technical issues, so bookmark and refresh this page.

- 10/12 Martin Hackmann (UCLA): “Interdependent Values in Matching Markets: Evidence from Danish Medical School Programs,” joint with Benjamin Friedrich, Adam Kapor, Sofia Moroni, and Anne Brink Nandrup.
- 11/23 Alan Sorensen (University of Wisconsin): “Embeddings and Distance-based Demand for Differentiated Products.”